Genealogies in the Värmland Archives¹

Nils William Olsson

Anyone who has dabbled in genealogical research recognizes the satisfaction achieved when one comes across literature, heretofore unknown to the searcher, found somewhere in an archives, a library, or even in a private collection. There are two thrusts of joy in this type of discovery—the primary, of course, being able to fit the newly discovered fact or facts into the puzzle which constitutes one's past. The second joy is to realize that someone else has trod this path before, going over the same ground and sharing the same interest as the searcher.

Any new information we can turn up which may be helpful to our readers, in their ongoing search for new material, gives the editor a lot of satisfaction. Recently on a visit to the Swenson Swedish Immigration Research Center in Rock Island, IL, we came across a recent announcement from the province of Värmland in Sweden, which may be of interest to those of our readers whose ancestry goes back to this particular geographical area of Sweden.

This announcement, dated February 1985, consists of a joint effort by two organizations in Värmland, which have been in the forefront of making archival materials available to searchers, materials not usually found in the much older and well established state and regional archives. One of these institutions, The Archives of Popular Movements (Folkrörelsernas arkiv), was founded in 1949 and seeks to preserve and make available to scholars material emanating from such folk movements as the labor unions, the disestablished churches of Sweden—Baptists, Methodists, Mission Covenant and the Pentecostals—workers' education movements and other idealistic and non-profit organizations, as for example the International Order of Good Templars. The second institution, founded in 1970-1971 on the initiative of the then Governor of Värmland Archives (Föreningen Värmlandsarkiv). In this central institution, funded by the county (län) government of Värmland, the city of Karlstad as well as by the leading industries of the province, it has been possible by this cooperation to organize an archives, which not only satisfies the needs of the local communities and the private sector, safeguarding their materials in a secure storage area, but also makes it possible for scholars and researchers to use these vast resources to be found in this central storehouse of information.

Though the storage depot is located in Forshaga, about fifteen miles north of Karlstad, it is quite feasible to have materials brought down to the central search room in Karlstad by means of motorized transport. The latest statistics show that the holdings as of 1979 held more than 36,000 running feet of shelving with 50% of the material coming from the private sector,² 35% from various municipal archives and 15% from a number of idealistic organizations.

While the storage depot is located in Forshaga, the administrative offices of both the Society of Värmland Archives and the Archives of the Popular Movements are located in Karlstad, where they share quarters in the central search room in the recently renovated and restored quarters of what used to be the municipal bath house of Karlstad. Here they also share quarters with the Emigrant Register.

In 1983 both of these institutions, referred to above, brought out the first version of an index listing the various genealogical manuscripts to be found in their holdings. Since that time additional genealogical material has been accessioned, notably the Bromander Collection, which consists of a large corpus of genealogical material amassed by the Rev. Carl Wilhelm Bromander, the former Dean of the Cathedral of Karlstad, who died in 1963 in his 99th year. This collection has recently been transferred from the Karlstad City Library to the Värmland Archives.

The second edition of this search aid is the work of Leif Gidlöf of the Värmland Archives and Berith Sande of the Archives of Popular Movements and lists the names of close to 1,400 genealogies now available in the central search room. These names have been taken from a more detailed card catalog, now in the center, where it may be consulted during the opening hours of the center. The manuscripts to which the cards refer are available in the stack areas adjoining the service desk.

It should be borne in mind that these genealogies vary very much in content, length and accuracy. Many of them have been done by competent persons, well schooled in historical research. Others may have been done by amateurs who have depended less on the critical focus. Nevertheless they all serve a useful purpose in providing new avenues of approach and perhaps offering new clues. Whatever their merits are, however, they should not be accepted at face value, but should be checked against the original sources.

It should also be stressed that the preponderance of these genealogies are regional in nature, being concentrated mostly to the geographical area of Värmland. For the researcher with roots in Värmland, this material might be of great value. For those with no Värmland forebearers the harvest may be minimal.

For those unable to visit the central search room in Karlstad, it is possible to order photocopies of the material on hand. The charge for xeroxing is approximately 15 cents per page, plus postage. Since it is difficult to know if a particular genealogy would be of help to the searcher, it might be wise to invest in a photocopy of the library card in the center's card catalog. This will give information as to the family sought, where the genealogical material came from, the volume number, etc. It is always wise to inquire first, before ordering the material. Some of the more lengthy material may not be of any interest. It should also be stressed that all of this material is in the Swedish language. The addresses of the two archival institutions involved in this joint project are:

Föreningen Värmlandsarkiv
% Leif Gidlöf
Box 475
651 07 Karlstad, SWEDEN

Folkkrörelsernas Arkiv
% Berith Sande
Box 162
651 07 Karlstad, SWEDEN

For those who wish to visit the archives in person the street address is:

Norra Strandgatan 4, Karlstad

In the index that follows there are instances where the letter "L" precedes the name. This signifies that the genealogy in question is also to be found in the Lagergren Collection at the Värmland Museum, also in Karlstad. Other sources for research on Värmland families for those intending to visit this lovely city are to be found in the Karlstad City Library. Genealogical material of a different nature, chiefly oriented toward the Värmland emigrant, can be found in the Emigrant Register, which shares the search room with the two archival institutions mentioned above.

Wanted!

Vol. I, No. 4, December 1981 of Swedish American Genealogist is out of print. Several libraries have inquired about the possibility of acquiring a complete run of the journal. Though we have xeroxed this particular issue, many wish to have the original. If any of our readers would like to part with this out-of-print issue, we are offering $5.00 for each such copy sent in before 15 Aug. 1986.
